Our Mission

To witness the presence of God by loving and caring for each other and living the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

MARCH 21, 2021 FIFTH SUNDAY OF LENT - SOLIDARITY SUNDAY

None of us needs a reminder that life is full of suffering and loss. We will all have a generous share of sorrow before we are through. We should not have too much difficulty recognizing ourselves in the moving words of Jesus: “now my soul is troubled; ... When we have lived a bit, then we will also have stumbled every so often upon the harsh reality of human suffering, suffering with its many faces. However, varied all the forms of suffering, they all make us wonder about life. What is the sense of it all? We can be so gripped by inner turmoil, so overcome by anguish, anxiety, and pain and our experience of life can be so devastating, that we can only cry out: “Save me from this hour.” If that is not our personal experience, I am sure we all know persons to whom this applies.

“Save me from this hour. My soul is troubled.” That is the cry of Jesus when he comes face to face with the tragedy of His life and when He must enter the school of suffering. And He wonders out loud: “what shall I say?” It is a question that comes straight from the heart of someone who begins to taste the cruelty and bitterness of life, the inhumane features that mark life for many. It becomes even more paradoxical when we consider that it is Jesus who utters these words. His life has been marked by resisting every form of suffering and He knew Himself called to be the healer of broken persons. But despite His healing commitment He finds Himself up against a power that will also claim Him: the power of suffering and death. He learns first-hand the human situation of suffering and dying. He prays aloud and in silent tears. It is the instinctive reaction of people when confronted with suffering: “Save me from this hour.”

But He does not stay there! The gospel today presses on. When Jesus is shaken by the thought of His immanent suffering and death He turns to God, He clings to Him. Precisely at this moment, Jesus cannot and will not let go of God. He continues to believe that, despite contrary evidence, God is His life and his future. When all becomes darkness around Him, He remains tuned into the God who has been the ground of His life-project. He pleads with God: “Father, glorify your name.” Mysterious words, no doubt. Words by which we will continue to be puzzled and embarrassed. “Father, glorify your name.” In these words, Jesus consents to the fact that in His suffering and death God will show His divine compassion for His people.

The suffering and death of Jesus becomes for God the occasion to show His presence and saving solidarity with us. That is the New Covenant. In the suffering and dying Jesus, God binds Himself irrevocably to us His people. It is a bonding that is marked by love and fidelity. As we face of all these inevitable losses that are integral to life, we are strengthened by the words of Jesus in today's gospel, “When I am lifted up from the earth, I will draw all people to myself.” We trust and believe that, at the end of the day, after we have struggled through all our losses, the Lord will draw us to Himself, and, when that happens, we will lack nothing.

God is faithful!

Father William
